DIRECTORY

This directory is the fourth one of this class to have been published, being preceded by one in 1899 by Dwight B. Cheever, one in 1904 by Henry E. Nothomb, and the most recent one published by Raymond A. Latting in 1931.

A complete list of every member of the class, including all those who were graduated and those who dropped out earlier, as well as some whose degrees were conferred at a later date has been given, and we have followed the plans of the former directories in listing information, insofar as possible, concerning each member, his address, his family status, and his career. Although every effort has been made to compile complete and accurate information, errors have crept in because of lack of definite material in many cases. Where just the last known post office address has been given, it is listed because mail sent there has not been returned and we have taken it for granted that it was received by that person, who has just neglected answering it.

Where death is known to have occurred, it is so stated together with the time and place if that information is available.

Records of the University, former directories, and letters from the class members, themselves, have all been used in gathering material, together with newspaper clippings and we have tried in every way to list modern, up-to-date data concerning each classmate.

It has been enjoyable work preparing this directory as we have received so many interesting letters from former classmates and as they contained such a fund of information, we are turning them all over to the Alumni office for their use.
